Message from the President

Pierre Conte

President of the Association Visa pour l'Image - Perpignan

A celebration

This year we celebrate the 200th anniversary of the invention of photography. Its invention soon led to the advent of photojournalism, combining images and the written word to add depth to reporting. Thirty-eight years ago, Visa pour l'Image was created by Jean-François Leroy, with support from Roger Thérond, the legendary editor-in-chief of Paris Match. The magazine's tagline for many years - "The weight of words, the impact of photos" - is as valid as ever. As can be seen at the "International Daily Press" exhibition (at the Chambre de commerce this year). Photojournalism and the media share a common destiny.

It is also the 200th anniversary of the oldest French newspaper, Le Figaro. How fitting that these two anniversaries should coincide. The fact that a news outlet has been resilient enough to survive so many turbulent periods and technological revolutions is a symbol of hope. In the same way that it is heartening to know that The New York Times has never had so many subscribers. That is why we decided to invite the Figaro's anniversary exhibition - and take advantage of this occasion to present an exhibition in the magnificent Loge de Mer for the first time.

Visa pour l'Image – Perpignan ("Visa") celebrates photography AND journalism. "Visa" celebrates the right to information AND freedom of information in a world where fewer and fewer countries enjoy these rights. "Visa" celebrates fact-checking by editorial teams because it is increasingly necessary to counter manipulation of all kinds. Because verifying facts has never been so difficult due to artificial intelligence that is still not sufficiently regulated. "Visa" celebrates photojournalists, their integrity and their courage. "Visa" celebrates their right to fair pay and their right to control their work. "Visa" celebrates the power and beauty of their work. "Visa" celebrates free will. Visa pour l'Image is a celebration, a fully conscious celebration.

Twenty-seven exhibitions, six original screenings at Campo Santo, discussions with photojournalists at the Palais des Congrès, and book signings at the festival bookshop in the Couvent des Minimes. Come and join the celebration! Thanks to the support of our public and private partners, it's free.

Enjoy!

Editorial

BY Jean-François Leroy

April 20, 2026

2026 began with a fake photograph: it showed the Venezuelan President, Nicolás Maduro, wearing handcuffs, accompanied by two US marines. Respectable media outlets and journalists who have grown up using social media – which they have come to regard as a reliable source of information – were taken in by the photograph.

But paradoxically, the AI revolution and its consequences may help to save journalism. Because, to be effective, these systems depend on recent, verified, reliable information. And who better than media professionals to provide such information?

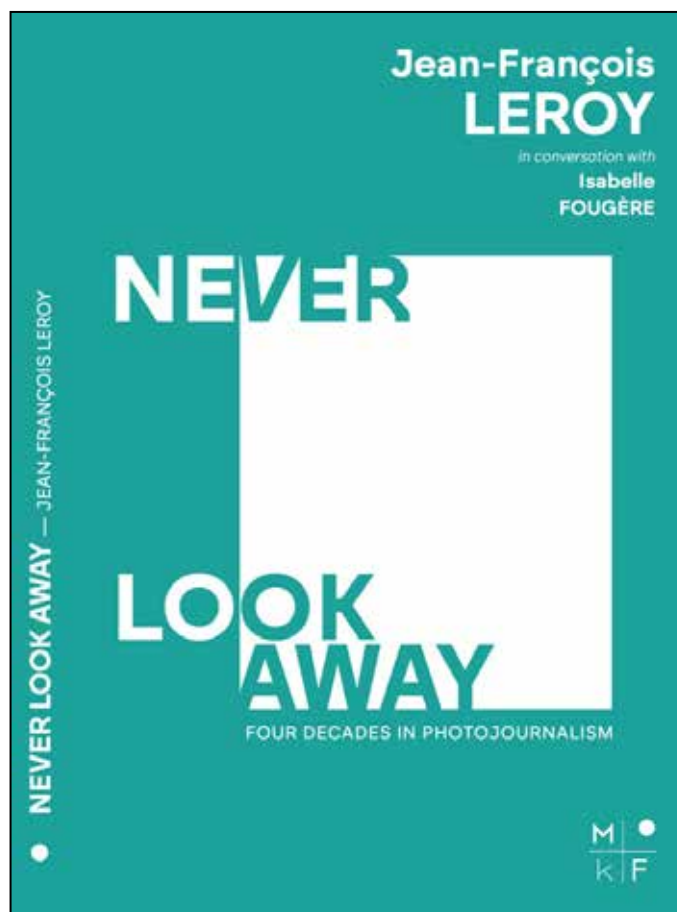

This explains why the tech giants have been so keen in the last three years to enter into partnerships with the big names in international media. Agreements were signed in haste by media outlets with their backs against the wall due to economic difficulties. History will tell if these agreements were in their interests, or if they have made a pact with the devil, eager to get his hands on their information.

The real photos of Maduro in New York, wearing handcuffs, do exist. They were taken by professional journalists and published by media outlets who rigorously follow rules that are perhaps a little old-fashioned, but are so important. And precious. The number of online subscriptions to The New York Times, Le Monde, The Financial Times and many others are testimony to this.

These 'old media outlets' share the same orthodox methods that we – as an 'old festival' – continue to defend and celebrate. Their influence, legitimacy and power are the last ramparts against the forces undermining reality, who have only one thing in mind: to destroy these media outlets or to acquire them so that they can promote their ideas – and especially their business interests. Evidence of this can be seen in the mergers and acquisitions of media outlets that have taken place this year, or in the witch hunts disguised as parliamentary committees paid for by the taxpayer to promote a repressive ideology.

Whether they come from politics or the technological sector, these powerful figures are either afraid of us, or they need us. That is why we will continue to defend our vision here, in Perpignan, as we have been doing for almost forty years. We hope that all those who continue to share our vision will join us and support us. It has not always been easy, but we are still standing... and still committed to the values of freedom and journalism.

For more than forty years, Jean-François Leroy has been poring over millions of pictures from across the entire world. Scenes of war, revolution and disaster, images of ordinary everyday life, of people opposing injustice and expressing solidarity.

There is no other person anywhere who has looked so closely at so many photos. As founder-director of the International Festival of Photojournalism Visa pour l'Image-Perpignan, he has been in the privileged position of directly experiencing all the changes in photojournalism, moving from the days of conventional photography, with negatives and prints, to instantaneous digital photography.

Jean-François Leroy's conversations with journalist and writer Isabelle Fougère are an opportunity for him to have a free-ranging discussion of his life in the heart of photojournalism, letting him cite the men and women who have been major figures in his life, and express his convictions and commitments—as well as his doubts. He describes his editorial approach, how he decides which pictures to show, and which not to show. As Jean-François Leroy makes clear, when looking, neutrality does not exist.

In our world now, billions of photos are taken every day. Social media and artificial intelligence have warped the relationship between humans and reality. We must not surrender our duty to the truth. We must never look away!

Over the nearly 40 years that we have been doing Visa pour l'Image in Perpignan, there has only ever been one rule: exhibiting and screening what we believed to be the best in photojournalism. It is a rule that I have never wanted to bend, even when the norms of the day suggested that we should ensure that there was parity in terms of gender, race, sex, etc.

However, as we approach the opening of our 38th edition, we have noticed that there has been a significant drop in the number of submissions to the festival from women; a drop that comes at a time when there has been a general decrease in production due to cuts in budgets for photography in media outlets.

This year, women only represent 22% of the festival program (exhibitions and screenings). Obviously, we would like this figure to be higher – as has been the case in previous editions. But female photojournalists – both young and old – have often told us that they do not want to be selected or to win awards due to positive discrimination – but rather on the strength of their talent.

Each year – and 2026 is no exception – the percentage of women in our program reflects the number of submissions that we have received from women.

Through our awards and grants, including the Canon Female Photojournalist Grant and the Françoise Demulder Photography Grants, supported by the Ministry of Culture, Visa pour l'Image continues to support all photographers, regardless of who they are, or where they are from. And we will also continue to assure our visitors and our partners that the editorial integrity that has underpinned the festival's success for 38 years will not change.

Civilians: The First Victims

This exhibition presents a body of work documenting the plight of civilians, the first victims of war, in Gaza. Through images of hunger, bombardment, displacement, loss, and daily survival, the exhibition reveals the human cost borne by families and communities living in unbearable conditions. These photographs stand as a visual testimony to the suffering, resilience, and dignity of civilians caught up in the war.

Far from the Sky

In the icy, clear waters of the Antarctic, in the murky seas of the Philippines, or in the depths of Cap Corse, where light fades and humans are scarce, nature persists and takes on astonishing forms. The exhibition, Loin du ciel (Far from the Sky), and the book of the same name, present images of the creatures Laurent Ballesta has encountered in the last ten years.

Syria: The Dawn of Ashes

After decades of dictatorship and thirteen years of war in Syria, it took less than a week to bring down Bashar al-Assad's regime. On December 8, 2024, the Hayat Tahrir al-Sham (HTS) group seized power in Damascus, redefining Syria's fate. The greatest challenge facing this new transitional government will be to unify the country's different communities and armed groups. In order to achieve lasting peace, it will have to satisfy the different internal and external parties. In a fractured and traumatized country, the wounds of the past resurfaced in flashes over the course of this first year of transition.

Afghanistan: The Girls Sold to Survive Drought

In the remote province of Badghis, Afghan girls have become commodities, traded by their families in order to survive the increasingly frequent and severe droughts caused by global warming. Due to lost harvests and livestock, it has become commonplace to marry them off at an increasingly young age. Even if the Taliban were to restore their access to secondary education, it would be too late for these girls, who have no future. As soon as they reach adolescence, they become wives and mothers and often become victims of domestic violence.

War in Sudan: a nation caught in a trap

Since April 15, 2023, Sudan has been embroiled in a war between the army and the Rapid Support Forces militia. This conflict has left the country in ruins, with cities bombed and people displaced. With images taken between 2020 and 2025, the exhibition chronicles the collapse of the country, which went from democratic hopes following an aborted revolution to one of today's worst humanitarian crises due to the devastating effects of rival armed groups vying for control. Millions have been displaced, and a generation is in danger. Yet, despite everything, the population has continued to resist and survive.

Virtual marriages in Japan

This exhibition tells the story of women and men who choose to marry fictional characters mostly from manga comics and video games. It explores a phenomenon at the intersection of otaku culture, the merchandise economy and new types of relationships. Despite the apparent strangeness of this topic, it raises very topical issues about contemporary societies: loneliness—whether chosen or imposed—social pressure, economic hardship, the growing role of the virtual world, and the changing nature of couples and perhaps even the family.

The People of Minneapolis vs. ICE

Weeks of unrest unfolded in Minneapolis, Minnesota, after federal agents shot two protesters and an immigrant amid President Donald Trump's crackdown on immigration. The killing of the protesters led to intense clashes. More than 3,000 agents were deployed to quell the unrest as immigration arrests continued. More than 4,000 people were arrested during the federal operation, surpassing the number arrested in Los Angeles and Chicago during the surges in those cities.

Kostiantynivka, a city in the kill zone

Under siege by the Russian army in eastern Ukraine, Kostiantynivka is facing an acute humanitarian crisis. Relentless aerial bombardments, drones, and artillery strikes are reducing the city to ashes. The last remaining residents risk their lives every time they venture out to gather wood or to find something to eat. Using drones, the Russian forces indiscriminately target civilians, volunteers and soldiers, killing on sight.

The Last War 2015-2026 – Lebanon

Hezbollah stands at a crossroads, caught between its claim to be Lebanon's protector and the weight of a country exhausted by war. For some, it remains a shield; for others, it is driving Lebanon toward the abyss. For the international community, its military wing is designated as a terrorist organization. The state's call for disarmament reflects fractures no ceasefire can resolve. Beneath the fragile calm, the balance between power, fear, and survival remains unsettled. What comes next will shape not just the conflict with Israel, but the future of Lebanon itself.

The School of Life: Liberty, Equality, Invisibility

This report, by Jérémy Lempin, examines illiteracy in France and French Guiana. It highlights a serious social issue that often takes root in childhood due to difficulties at school and manifests itself later in the lives of adults who struggle to read, write, do basic math, and live independently. Through personal stories, the report underlines social divides, and shows examples of people who manage to regain their dignity. It raises the question of what it means to live in a society where the ability to read, write, and do basic math determines whether a person has access to the most fundamental rights. A compassionate study of a hidden wound in French society.

Boza free: The Exile of Guinean Minors

The biggest contingent of unaccompanied minors in France today is from Guinea. This exhibition tells the story of young Guineans as they travel from Conakry to Paris, via Tunisia and the Alps. Given the economic crisis and the mass unemployment in Guinea, many young people, both in the neighbourhoods of Conakry and in the inland regions, see exile as their only option. The report follows these young people as they leave home and cross borders. Often invisible, they have to overcome significant hardship, but they are driven by the same goal: to study, work and build a future in Europe.

War Diary

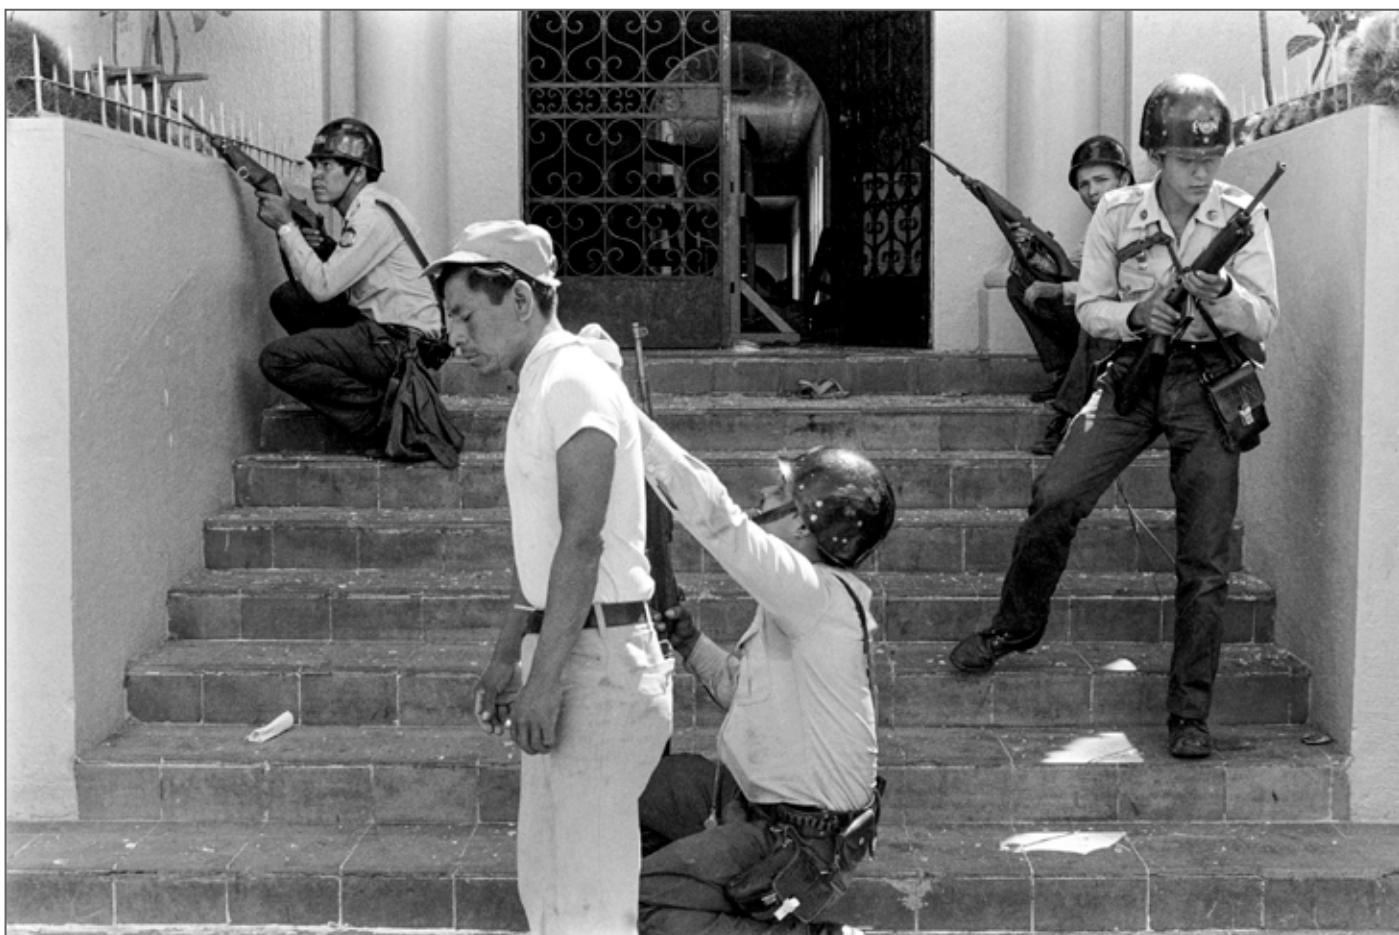

Photographed throughout Israel during the war between the U.S., Israel and Iran, War Diary documents the experience of living under constant threat. As sirens alter the rhythm of everyday existence, civilians adapt to a reality of shelters, fear, and uncertainty. Moving beyond geopolitical narratives, this project focuses on the human toll of the conflict and the gradual normalization of emergency conditions. It shows a society learning to function as uncertainty becomes part of everyday life.

No End in Sight: Chernobyl 40 Years Later

Chernobyl 40 Years Later: No End in Sight is Gerd Ludwig's decades-long documentation of the world's worst nuclear catastrophe. His images dating from 1993 through 2026 chronicle its post-apocalyptic world—the destroyed reactor, the ghost town of Pripyat, life in the Exclusion Zone, and victims across the fallout regions—through unexpected twists and turns such as illegal returnees, disaster tourism, military occupation, and a Russian drone strike, suggesting there is no end in sight to the disaster's consequences.

Cambodia: From One War to the Next

In 2025, Thailand attacked Cambodia, and has now annexed a strip of its territory. Its artillery has seriously damaged several Angkorian heritage sites, including the Preah Vihear temple, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The border dispute between the two countries is not new, but this time the fighting was particularly fierce, despite the imbalance in military strength between the two countries. This complex crisis has left many dead and displaced thousands of families. It has a particular resonance in Cambodia, where each family still mourns those who died in past conflicts. Fifty years after the start of the genocide by the Khmer Rouge, the wounds have not healed.

Sangre Blanca The Geography of Cocaine

We are living in the golden age of cocaine. Consumption and production have never been higher, and Europe is now the world's largest market. In Sangre Blanca, Mads Nissen traces the human consequences of the global cocaine trade—from the neglected countryside of Colombia and the cartel heartlands of Mexico to the dealers and craving consumers of Europe's nightlife. More than fifty years into the War on Drugs, the report raises a simple yet urgent question: Is this strategy really working—and, if so, for whom?

In 2016, in Shchastia in the Donbass region, a group of teenagers were growing up a few kilometers from the frontline. Today Shchastia is occupied by the Russian army. The once close group of friends have taken different paths. They have become Ukrainian soldiers or Russian soldiers, patriots or collaborators, heroes or disappeared, parents or martyrs. They live in different areas, whether in occupied zones, in Ukraine, in Russia or abroad. Their experiences reflect ten years of war and how the fighting has shaped a generation of Ukrainians

The Smell of India

Paolo Roversi takes us on a dreamlike photographic journey, in which India emerges as a land poised between shadow and light, reality and illusion. Since the 1990s, he has developed a distinctive visual style based on slowness, extended exposure times, and a willingness to embrace the unexpected. Vibrant blurs, deep blacks, and milky whites are the building blocks of his visual language. Using sepia tones and muted colors, he depicts a mystical and timeless India. His landscapes, scenes of daily life, and portraits create a delicate world where bodies and places are shaped by light. What emerges is a kaleidoscopic portrait, imbued with softness and elegance.

Iran: The Cycle of War

On February 28, 2026, for the second time in a year, Iran was plunged into another war. Airstrikes by Israël and the United States set the Middle East ablaze. For the people of Teheran, already worn down by the “Twelve-Day War” and the crackdown on the January protests, this new ordeal unfolded behind closed doors. Access to internet was blocked, and only internet connections obtained at exorbitant costs allowed them to stay connected to the rest of the world. These photographs capture the uncertainty of a whole nation. While the future remains impossible to predict, the Iranian people continue to be caught between war, repression and hope.

Broken by Kush

In Sierra Leone and Liberia, a new synthetic drug is wreaking havoc among young people. Kush is cheap, but it leads to rapid addiction and causes serious, often fatal, injuries. On the streets of Freetown and Monrovia, tens of thousands of young people drift aimlessly, their bodies and lives shattered by addiction. The number of clandestine labs is growing, while government efforts to stem this health crisis remain ineffective. Abandoned by the authorities, families and neighborhood committees are trying to save those who have fallen into the clutches of this terrible drug.

Since 2023, the highlands of the Amhara region in northwestern Ethiopia have been ravaged by one of the world's least visible wars. A local nationalist militia, known as Fano, has launched a widespread armed insurgency, seizing large swaths of territory. This rebellion, which has spread from the recent war in neighboring Tigray in a context of inter-ethnic violence, has been fueled by the brutality of government forces, who have committed numerous abuses against local populations accused of supporting the insurgents. Robin Tutenges travelled through these rebel-held territories, cut off from the world, to document a conflict that has already claimed thousands of lives.

On March 2, 2026, war broke out once again. Yet another war. One war too many. Hezbollah's offensive against Israel, in support of the Iranian regime, dragged Lebanon into a conflict that it did not want. The Israeli army responded with a massive bombing campaign, even targeting neighborhoods in central Beirut. Within seven weeks, 2000 people had been killed, 7000 had been injured, and a million people – a fifth of the population - had been displaced.

Le Figaro: Cultivating freedom since 1826

On January 15, 1826, a new newspaper was launched in France. It was called Le Figaro - "satirical, witty and combative", much like Beaumarchais' famous barber from whom it took its name. Shaken by the upheavals of history, threatened by successive political regimes, its ownership changed hands. Though at times it was weakened, it always managed to recover. Le Figaro became a daily newspaper, and as the decades passed, it became a powerful and independent publication. It chose its battles, defending Captain Dreyfus, and voluntarily ceasing publication in 1942 only to be reborn in 1944. It introduced a new format by publishing an illustrated interview of General Boulanger in 1889. Photography had recently been invented and Le Figaro embraced it. It would become a key feature of the daily newspaper and later of its magazines.

Since 2020, the Urban Newcomer Photographer's Grant, supported by Google in collaboration with Dysturb and Visa pour l'Image, has helped a new generation of photographers to emerge. Each year, the grant recognizes a unique perspective on the changes and challenges affecting urban environments and their inhabitants.

This exhibition brings together the six previous grant recipients. Their work reflects the variety of approaches to urban photography that exist today.

Transmission pour l'Image

A “Workshop” unlike any other

August 31 to September 2, 2026

Fees due

Transmission pour l'Image is not really a workshop. Rather, it is a forum for meeting and discussing, and most importantly, for “transmitting” knowledge and know-how from one generation of photojournalists to the next.

Transmission pour l'Image is not a course on how to take pictures. Rather, it is an opportunity to hear photographers and picture editors talking about their work, the choices they have made, and explaining how they have produced, chosen, published and sold their pictures. Transmission will allow photojournalists to embrace and uphold the basic principles that Visa pour l'Image has always believed in.

The participants will have an opportunity to take part in this event over three full days, learning from and interacting with professional mentors.

For the seventh time, Google, Visa pour l'Image and Dysturb will award a grant for an emerging photographer working in and on France. The three partners are committed to promoting innovative approaches to urban stories.

The award winner will receive €8,000 to fund their projects and will be given support by Google, Visa pour l'Image and Dysturb.

La Saif-Benoît Schaeffer Publishing Grant for a Photography Book

As a tribute to photojournalist Benoît Schaeffer who passed away in 2020, La SAIF* (Société des auteurs des arts visuels et de l'image fixe) has launched a new grant program for the publication of photography books. The grant is designed to support and highlight the work of a professional press or documentary photographer and provide backing needed to publish a printed book.

The grant is open to photographers living in France who make a submission to produce a book in association with a publishing house. The grant sponsored by La SAIF is for €10,000 and will be presented at one of the evening shows at Visa pour l'Image – Perpignan.

Awards

ANI-PixTrakk Award

For twenty-six years, the ANI (Association Nationale des Iconographes) has been organizing portfolio presentations during the festival's professional week, providing guidance and advice to more than 200 photographers. At the end of each festival, the ANI selects three nominees from a shortlist of favorite portfolios for the following year's ANI-PixTrakk Award.

In 2026, the seventeenth ANI award will be presented, with prize money of €6,000 sponsored by PixTrakk.

The award-winning work will be displayed at the "Visas de l'ANI" exhibition held in Paris.

Boulat Award

The award, which is being sponsored by The Douglas Kirkland Estate (the collecting society for multimedia authors), is designed to help a photographer carry out an original reporting project.

The jury will convene in June to select the winner who will be presented with the award, with prize money of €8,000, at the Campo Santo evening show on Thursday, September 3.

The Écologie 360 - Reporters of Hope Award

This new award is in keeping with Visa pour l'Image's long-standing commitment to quality photojournalism and the work that Écologie 360 and Reporters of Hope are doing to show that environmental news can promote enthusiasm and action rather than despair. The award recognizes a perspective that is resolutely positive, optimistic and a source of hope in relation to the ecological transition taking place around the world. The winner of this first edition is Laurent Ballesta for his extraordinary work on - and in - the oceans.

Just Causes and Copyright: The Challenge of Fair Compensation for Photojournalists When Their Work is Used by Campaigners

When a photojournalist's work is used outside a strict news-related context, to serve a cause, whether by a humanitarian organization, an NGO or a campaign group, this creates a paradox. The fact that the photographer and the organization share the same convictions may make it easier for the image to be used, but at the same time, it tends to lead to a lack of recognition of its economic value. How can the photojournalist's right to compensation be defended when an image becomes an advocacy tool? Can a "donation" by a photographer be quantified without devaluing the profession? What impact does this issue have specifically on women photojournalists, in a sector where they are already faced with persistent pay gaps and where appeals to "solidarity" can justify lower monetary compensation?

This roundtable will bring together legal experts and photojournalists to define a framework in which activism no longer means sacrificing one's rights.

Speakers to be announced.

Roundtable Under the Drones: Journalists and the Dangers of Autonomous Killer Robots

04-09 - 3pm

PALAIS DES CONGRÈS - Charles Trenet auditorium
FREE ADMISSION

Military drones are evolving very quickly, radically changing the way journalists work, sometimes even putting their lives at risk. This roundtable brings together representatives from media outlets, news agencies and humanitarian organizations to discuss the risks associated with drones and how this technology is changing the way journalists work.

Screening Catherine Leroy, une française dans la guerre du Vietnam

05-09 - 5pm

PALAIS DES CONGRÈS - Charles Trenet auditorium
FREE ADMISSION / IN FRENCH ONLY

A film by Marie-Christine Gambart, written by Judith Perrignon & Marie-Christine Gambart. Produced by France Télévision and Morgane Production with support from the Catherine Leroy Fund.

Screening followed by a discussion with the audience.

One of the few female photographers to have covered the Vietnam War between 1966 and 1968, Catherine Leroy (1944-2006), left behind some of the most striking photos of this conflict. Having arrived in Saigon without any experience at the age of 21, she worked alongside American soldiers who were the same age as her. Soon, her photographs were published on the front pages of the biggest newspapers around the world. Through her letters and her photos, we experience the horror of the war as it drags on, and the emergence of a great photographer who was too quickly forgotten.

Audiens will be present at Visa pour l'Image - Perpignan

03-09 & 04-09 - 10am to 6pm

PALAIS DES CONGRÈS

Come and see us on the ground floor of the Palais des Congrès to discuss the issues you face professionally and how we can help you. AI, propaganda, satellites: new images related to war

Satellite images (genuine and fake) of devastated cities, propaganda films featuring Lego characters generated using artificial intelligence, anti-Iran videos by the White House made from cartoons and images from Hollywood films: too often, the war-related images circulating on social media do not show the harsh reality of conflicts. How are these created? What impact do they have? What are their limitations? How can we reconnect with reality?

Visa pour l'Image + Amandiers

October 16 & 17, 2026

Visa pour l'Image at the Théâtre Nanterre-Amandiers in Paris!

The emblematic theater in the west of Paris has invited the International Festival of Photojournalism, Visa pour l'Image (38th edition).

Each year, in Perpignan, this festival offers visitors the unique experience of seeing the world through the eyes of the greatest photojournalists in a whirlwind of powerful images.

On October 16 & 17, 2026, a few weeks after it is reopened following four years of renovation work, the Théâtre Nanterre-Amandiers will host Visa pour l'Image in its fully renovated, 800-seat main auditorium.

A selection of reports will be shown on a giant screen for two sessions presented by Jean-François Leroy and Pauline Cazaubon.

- Friday, October 16, 2026 at 8pm
- Saturday, October 17, 2026 at 6pm

*The content of the two screenings will be identical.
Admission is free, subject to availability.*

the photo labs over the past 38 festivals.

Since 1989, we have presented around 1,025 exhibitions, with prints produced by the best Paris-based professionals.

Our special thanks go to these behind-the-scenes men and women who, over the years, have helped to shed light on the work of the photographers, which is the festival's showcase and one of its main trademarks.
